The foxy fashionista lists famous brands such as Givenchy and Yves Saint Laurent as some of her favourites. Like you, that means absolutely zero to us, but we're 100 per cent certain that she looks irresistible, all day, every day!

What's better than one beautiful Jenner? Two, of course! However take note, Kendall fans: this older sibling doesn't like chocolate, so if you want to surprise her, you'll have to do better than a box of Milk Tray!

3. She's everywhere on TV!

As well as appearing on Keeping Up With The Kardashians now and again, you'll also find kylie making a cameo on all three of the Kourtney And Kim Take... shows. However, what we're interested in is the rumour that soon she'll be fronting her own spin-off show with her hotter than hot sister Kendall.

4. She's Insta-sexyWith pictures like these, it's no wonder 39 million people follow her Instagram feed.

5. Let's not forget... She's also got that trademark Jenner/Kardashian bum. Need we say more? Just... wow!

DANIEL GRAIG!

"Take a selfie with me – and l'II thump you!"

Daniel Craig discusses everything from the next 007 and Austin Powers, to drinking, Seth Rogen and why he can't wait to quit playing Bond...

EY, DANIEL! RUMOUR HAS IT YOU OFFERED SAM MENDES THE DIRECTING JOB ON BOND WHEN YOU WERE P*SSED...

Kind of. I was at a party and Sam was there. He doesn't drink, and I certainly wasn't sober, and we talked at length about what we love about Bond movies, and then I offered him the gig. It probably wasn't my job to do so, but hey...

WE'RE GUESSING IT WAS IMPORTANT TO HAVE

HIM BACK FOR SPECTRE? Critical. We had started something on Skyfall and I wanted to finish it. I called him relentlessly, four times a day, until eventually he said yes.

DO YOU STILL GET EXCITED EVERY DAY ON SET?

I love playing Bond. It's such an honour and I get such a big kick out of doing it. These films don't get made very often and if you can't get excited about making a movie of this size, then you need to go home. DID MENDES MAKE SURE TO PUSH YOU,

GIVEN THE MASSIVE SUCCESS OF SKYFALL?

Absolutely. I damaged my knee about a third of the way through shooting and we shut down for two weeks while I had surgery. I'm alright now, but I'm a hell of a long fking way from perfect!

DID THEY HAVE YOU ON A SECRET 007 REGIME TO GET IN SHAPE?

No secret, just the usual hard graft, working myself to death. It's getting harder, but such is life.

YOU GET STEAMY WITH YOUR CO-STAR MONICA BELLUCCI IN SPECTRE.

WHAT'S IT LIKE TO LOCK LIPS WITH SUCH A

BEAUTIFUL LADY?

A gentleman never kisses

YOUR BOND MOVIES TEND TO BE QUITE FUNNY. WILL THERE BE PLENTY MORE JOKES IN SPECTRE?

Definitely. It allows the audience to laugh, in-between those moments of tension. I always wanted to bring comedy back to the franchise, but Mike Myers really screwed us when he used the best spy gag of all time with Ivana Humpalot.

OUTSIDE OF BOND, IS COMEDY SOMETHING YOU'D LIKE TO TRY MORE?

Comedy? Not at all! For people like Seth Rogen, that's all improvisation. They're funny people and I simply couldn't do that sort of thing. WHAT WAS THE LAST WEEK OF FILMING LIKE?

We were in Morocco before the very end and we went out there and blew sh*t up like a proper Bond movie. It was certainly a good way to finish.

HAVE YOU HAD ANY CONVERSATIONS ABOUT STAYING ON FOR THE 25TH MOVIE IN THE SERIES

Right now, all I'm thinking about is a holiday and reminding my friends I exist. I'm not thinking about any work, let alone another Bond.

ARE THERE ANY IDEAS YOU'VE HELD BACK JUST IN CASE?

I'm not sure – every idea I've had for a Bond movie is in SPECTRE. My Bond bank is dry, so to speak. We could go into space? They already did it in Moonraker, but why not do it again?

ARE YOU LOOKING FORWARD TO THE DAY YOU'RE NO LONGER PLAYING 007?

Don't get me wrong, I'm incredibly fortunate, but the day I can walk into a pub and someone goes,

WHAT DO WE CALL IT?

We thought we knew. In fact, almost everyone on the planet was certain the show was going to be called Gear Knobs after Clarkson's law firm registered to bed with the tweet below. We guess it's back to the drawing board, then...

THEY'RE LOADED

In a cheeky dig at the pennypinching Beeb, Clarkson tweeted he was on location with a "skeleton crew" of 50 people, so it's obvious Amazon Prime has put plenty of cash behind the new venture. "Amazon has

Taking the world by STORM!

Revolutionary Pulse looks set to change the way we view electric motorcycles group of irritatingly intelligent students from the Eindhoven University Of Technology will undertake an epic task next year. Their all-electric, twowheeled Franken-bike the Storm Pulse - will attempt to circumnavigate the globe in 80 days without emitting a single gram of nasty stuff from the tailpipes or blowing up in a giant, fiery ball of disaster.

The madcap machine you see in front of you is powered by a rather natty removable battery system that's easily charged in around seven hours from a standard wall socket.

But these individual cells can also be removed and rapidly replaced on the go, meaning the intrepid explorers won't have to stop and plug in their bikes while traversing a particularly barren slice of eastern Europe, for example.

Maartje Verhoek, sponsorship manager of the Storm Pulse project, says she hopes the bike will make people realise that electric motoring can be cool, fun and take you a long way.

But - and this is way more telling - she also thinks that the funky battery cells could be stocked in traditional petrol stations, so future electric bikers could simply pull up, swap the cells and drive off, without worrying about charging times.

Admittedly, the Storm

Pulse may not turn heads with its styling cues (it looks a bit like it's suffering from elephantiasis) but it packs a performance punch, as it's able to accelerate from 0-60mph in under five seconds, while it will happily travel for 236 miles on a single charge.

It's an impressive feat of engineering, one that's made even more remarkable when vou consider it was designed and built by a bunch of snakebite-swilling students.

Down on his luck gambling addict Gerry (Ben Mendelsohn) meets Curtis (Ryan Reynolds) - a charming, enigmatic, carefree journeyman - at a poker game in Iowa. Convinced Curtis is his new lucky charm, the pair set off on a roadtrip to New Orleans (via St Louis, Memphis, Mississippi and Little Rock) to discover themselves and reunite with lost family.

Reynolds is particularly brilliant playing the disorganised, laid-back Curtis, who always seems to land on his feet (usually with a hot girl or two on each arm), while Sienna Miller and Lucy's Analeigh Tipton play a pair of call girls along for the ride.

It may lose steam towards the end, but it proves the house doesn't always win. ★★★★☆

Moving Assassin's Creed to the cobbled streets of London was always going to get us excited, but it doesn't simply look great - it gives us a patriotic slice of non-stop action by doubling up on heroes with the downright brutal Frye Twins.

It's a hell of a lot faster too, with a much-needed injection of speed that throws you straight into the action with coaches, trains and grappling hooks aplenty to get you from A to B faster than a Northern Line tube during rush hour.

Combine that with a vastly detailed city, loads of Cockney gang fights that even Guy Ritchie would be proud of as well as the chance to grab a quick pint with Charles Dickens - and it's really no surprise as to why we're utterly sold on this latest epic adventure. ★★★★☆

DWAYNE JOHNSON

HI, DWAYNE! IN SAN ANDREAS YOU PLAY RAY, A SEARCH AND RESCUE HELICOPTER PILOT WHO WOULD DO ANYTHING TO PROTECT HIS LOVED ONES. DO YOU IDENTIFY WITH HIM IN THAT ASPECT?

Without question. I would do anything and everything to keep my family and loved ones safe.

WHAT DID YOU DO TO PREPARE FOR THE ROLE?

I was lucky enough to spend some time with real LAFD firefighters, and also spent time with a lot of helicopter rescue pilots in Australia while we were shooting on the Gold Coast, I've always seen first responders as unsung heroes and very special people, because when everyone else is running away from danger, they run into it.

DID THAT EXPERIENCE HELP?

I'm not sure if I will ever play a character like Ray again, who embodies all these very special qualities. I was fortunate to get to do it in this film, and I walked off the set every day humbled. I also like that Ray has strong women around him, who he loves and respects SPEAKING OF STRONG

WOMEN, WHAT CAN YOU SAY OF CARLA GUGINO, WHO PLAYS YOUR WIFE EMMA?

This is our third movie together. Carla is so unique because of the powerful weight and gravitas she brings to all her performances, especially this one. She's really special and puts so much heart into everything she does. I can't say enough good things about her. HOW MUCH ACTION WERE

YOU INVOLVED IN DURING THIS SHOOT IN AUSTRALIA?

I was involved in a tremendous amount of action, but it was different from other movies I've made in that it was relentless. Also, I have a great stunt double, but I wanted to do everything precisely because so much of it was shot in-camera.

SO, WHEN WE SEE YOU DOING THESE CRAZY STUNTS, THAT'S WITHOUT VISUAL EFFECTS?

We used visual effects to augment and extend a shot. When you see me on a boat in San Francisco Bay, I was really there. We even built three stories of a building set to scale and submerged it in a tank! YOU'VE WORKED WITH THE DIRECTOR BRAD PEYTON

BEFORE. WHAT QUALITIES DOES HE BRING TO THE FILM? He was hungry to create an epic movie in 3D that could redefine how these films are made. That required the right vision and keen awareness. Brad knows how to capture the audience and immerse them in the action, but he never loses sight of the human element. You experience this through the eyes of these characters as they struggle to survive and protect loved ones.

INSIDE THE WORLD'S BIGGEST CRIME SYNDICATE

THE RISE OF

The story of the Italian mafia that became bigger than McDonald's after raking in £40bn in a year...

hen you think of Italy's mafia powerhouses, you usually look no further than the Cosa Nostra, whose crimes inspired The Godfather trilogy.

But this once untouchable outfit's influence has waned in recent years, allowing a new group - the 'Ndrangheta - to take its place at the top. Now the Italian authorities are after a gang bigger than the Cosa Nostra and richer than McDonald's. Meet the most secretive mafia on the planet...

The early days

The gang's name only reached a wider audience when mentioned by an Italian writer in 1955, and until 1975 the secretive mobsters kept their business operations to the Calabria region of Italy.

From 1973 until 1991 it was involved in bloody wars, as well as the kidnapping of John Paul Getty III, whose grandfather was one of Europe's richest men. Oilman Getty at first refused to pay for his safe return, but ended up forking out $2.9m after the gang cut off one of his grandson's ears.

To end the war, the families involved became members of a superordinate division called La Provincia, as suggested by Cosa Nostra. Eventually the group began to invest in the international drugs trade.

Building an empire

After a crackdown from the authorities, the Cosa Nostra's activities were restricted to infiltrating local businesses to extort money, which gave the 'Ndrangheta its chance to emerge from the underworld and flourish as an illegal organisation globally.

Only known for its activities in Calabria, the group soon successfully infiltrated Milan. Owing its power to its cocaine trafficking and close ties with South American cartels, it was soon able to build a presence across the whole of Italy.

This was largely due to it taking advantage of Italy's ever-growing cocaine consumption. Between 2007 and 2008, the usage in Milan alone had grown by 27 per cent. In 2010 it had increased by 40 per cent. It's now estimated that one in six people in Milan snorts cocaine on a regular basis and much of this can be attributed to Europe's new drug-trafficking superpower: the 'Ndrangheta.

The group's members started to use their emerging influence to do business with local public officials, obtaining contracts in exchange for delivering votes for political campaigns. It was alleged that the government of Milan's former Mayor, Letizia Moratti, was heavily infiltrated by the criminal organisation, despite her publicly denying it on more than one occasion.

However, it was later discovered their political connections had allowed them to muscle in on highprofile contracts such as high-speed railways and the Milan-Venice highway.

The peak

As the gang's illicit profits reached its highest level, with €20bn coming from illegal rubbish disposal alone and another €24bn from drug trafficking, the authorities decided to step in - and launched a national Anti-Mafia taskforce to bring down the 'Ndrangheta. However, the group carried on using financial donations to convince corrupt politicians to cover for them. By 2014 its global income was €53bn.

The cops move in

At the height of its success, cracks started to appear between different factions of the group. One shocking moment in 2007 brought them under the international spotlight.

Six Italian men, thought to be part of rival 'Ndrangheta clans, were massacred in Germany while leaving a birthday party. This led to the Italian officials launching a crackdown on 'Ndrangheta operations.

In 2011, a suspected boss, Francesco Maisano, was

Busted

In July 2015, enough evidence had been collected on the gang, and even US undercover officers were sent in to infiltrate the transatlantic business of the mob. Italian police issued 41 more arrest warrants and seized 1,500 betting shops, 82 gambling websites, 45 Italian companies and another 11 businesses on foreign soil worth close to £1.5bn.

While it was found the companies were most likely not profitable, they were used by the gang to recycle a huge amount of "dirty money" which they reinvested in legitimate enterprise. And although the £1.5bn is a small dent in the 'Ndrangheta's business, it has proven a massive boost for the Anti-Mafia taskforce.

ITALY'S BIGGEST CRIME BOSSES...

Cosa Nostra

Also known as the Sicilian Mafia, a group of families and "clans" who operate with similar structure, methods, and interests.

Camorra

One of the oldest and largest criminal organisations in Italy, unlike the Mafia's "Godfather" structure, the Camorra clans act independently.

Sacra Corona Unita

Set up in the 1970s, it specialises in smuggling, charging criminal groups "landing rights" to the Apulian coast.

Getting intimate with... Salone

It's your chance to get to know the Latvian lovely, as she tells us about her love of lingerie, comfortable sleeping and how to look wonderful in winter...

THERE MUST BE SOME DRAWBACKS TO HAVING AMAZINGLY BIG BOOBS?

Well, it makes it hard to run so they're not ideal if you need to get out of the way very quickly. And I'm forever knocking things over – I'm always turning around and forgetting they are there. It's the same with my bum: I just don't realise how far it sticks out sometimes!

WHO ARE YOUR FAVOURITE BUSTY MODELS?

Oh, that's a tough question! I love Holly Peers, I think her boobs are absolutely perfect and they're very soft. Courtnie Q and Rosie Jones are also both amazing.

YOU'RE A BIT OF A GLOBETROTTER. WHERE ARE YOU OFF TO NEXT?

Well, I'm going over to Cyprus for a lingerie and swimwear shoot, which is going to be fun. Nothing beats the sexy feeling you get when wearing lingerie.

ANYWHERE ELSE?

Well, I went out to Germany for Oktoberfest. It was madness: you get all this food to eat and then I drank so much beer that I just couldn't bring myself to move! But when I did manage to get up, I hit the dancefloor with everyone else in my sexy lederhosen.

I, KARL. HOW EXCITED ARE YOU THAT THE MOANING OF LIFE IS BACK?

I don't know. It's not aimed at me. I've reached the age that if I wasn't in it, I don't know if I'd go out of my way to watch it.
I prefer YouTube. If YouTube was around when I was at school, I'd be doing something better than this now. YouTube is great. You can learn about black holes, watch a cat run into a glass door, watch a gorilla ride a BMX, then learn about shape-shifting octopuses.

THE FIRST EPISODE WAS ALL ABOUT ART —
INCLUDING MAKING DOG
POO SCULPTURES ON THE STREETS OF NEW YORK...

Good that, wasn't it? We don't have that problem here. When was the last time you saw dog sh*t? Growing up, it was everywhere. My local park was like a minefield. I reckon I was cleaning out the tread in my trainers more than I cleaned my teeth. Now, people walk around with Kindles and tweeting and Facebook and all that. You couldn't do that in the '80s. You'd be covered in it.

HOW WAS IT DANCING AROUND TIMES SQUARE IN YOUR PANTS IN THE NAME OF "PERFORMANCE ART"?

There's a bit of a show-off inside me. I think we all want to stand out from the crowd. But the outside says, "I don't want to do it". I was sh*tting myself but by the end, it was the best experience I've ever had.

IS THERE ANYTHING YOU'D NEVER DO?

Is there anything worse than getting your tackle out on telly? I kind of do in one episode, but you don't see it. Only my girlfriend and my doctor see that. I still don't like bungee jumps and things like that. That's what I've got to stop. Else it's like, "He's an idiot, him. He does anything to get on TV." I don't, I can do without this now. If I never go away and film anything again, I've done it. I've seen madness.

THIS WEEK'S EPISODE IS ABOUT IDENTITY. SO WHO IS KARL PILKINGTON?

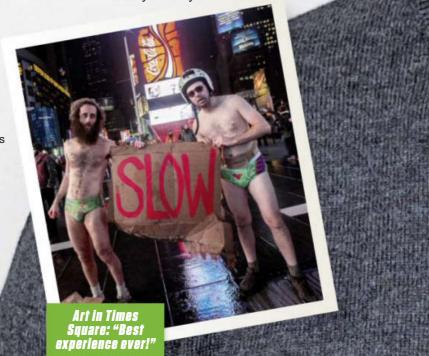

Karl Pilkington's dull. We looked into doing Who Do You Think You Are? Apparently, I have the dullest family line going. I hate these people who find out they're related to Henry VIII and never shut up. WHAT ELSE CAN WE LOOK FORWARD TO?

There's an episode on values. The rules you live by, or choose not to live by. I meet a bloke who's got five wives. There's one on time: how much time we've got on the planet, what we do with it. On paper, it all sounds pretty dull. It's the people I meet that make it. I like it when they're really into something and they don't care what I think. DO YOU BRAG TO MRS PILKINGTON?

I don't really tell her. I get home, open the post, see what's happened while I've been away. Have a cup of tea and a piece of cake. She's been on her own, fed up, and wants a holiday. I don't. The last time I got home, I mowed the lawn. I'm really into my lawn. I'm in my own little world, getting the lines dead straight. I look out of the window at the lawn and go, "I've done that". We're talking about this show like it's important. It's not. It's just killing a bit of time, isn't it?

WHAT ELSE SHOULD WE KNOW ABOUT YOU?

Well, I'm a bit of a party animal!

I've been to all the best party spots in the world: LA, Miami... and I even partied with Prince Harry while we were in Dubai last November!

YOU KNOW PRINCE HARRY IS A BIG ZOO FAN?

I didn't. But we are friends so I'm sure if he does spot my shoot, he'll drop me a message. BACK TO THE SHOW, HOW

I think they wanted it to be a bit classier, but it didn't stop me from being a bit naughty – even if I was the only one. The producers just didn't make a big deal of it as they didn't want it to be like Geordie Shore.

INSIDE T, BIGGEST AND FUNNIEST STORIES FROM THE WORLD OF SPORT!

Kop Klopp's head

With Kloppmania in overdrive on Merseyside, we go inside the mind of the German wizard to see how he intends to lead the Reds to glory...

When Luis Suarez left Liverpool in the summer of 2014, Klopp was adamant the Reds would become stronger, arguing Dortmund was able to push on after losing key players Mario Gotze and Robert Lewandowski. He never builds a team around one exceptional individual (like the Liverpool of recent years) because opponents need to only contain one player to stop the entire team.

Fall in love with scoring

No more one-man team

"Gegenpressing"

Developed during his time at Mainz, Klopp's favoured style of play is dubbed "gegenpressing". It's a high-pressure counter-attacking style which relies on getting enough men around the ball as soon as possession is lost. Where it differs from the style developed by Pep Guardiola at Barcelona is what Klopp's side does once they win possession back: play the ball forward immediately, and sprint into open spaces as your opponent shifts from attack to defence.

There's nothing more important to The Normal One than scoring. Every goal is special and should be treated as such. At Dortmund, he would show his players photos of Barcelona goal celebrations to demonstrate how they celebrated each as though it was their first. He saw that as the most important lesson coming out of Camp Nou.

A training ground manager, Klopp likes to focus sessions on controlling space and positioning yourself to influence the opposition while out of possession. Liverpool stalwart Lucas Leiva was quick to point out how impressed he was with the new boss' first full training session. "He likes to put in everything and he asks the players for the same. Be very intense, and be aggressive with yourself is what he's been saying," said Lucas.

Klopp has already stressed a number of times the team's stability comes from a good defence. And while being a massive exponent of attacking football, he also sets his teams up to defend in numbers. Without the ball, his Dortmund side would drop back from 4-2-3-1 to 4-4-1-1, denying space with two banks of four.

Having already been pictured sharing a beer with the fans and visiting a popular Italian eaterie, the German is integrating himself with the city. An idealist, he believes football belongs to the fans and likes to break down the barriers between the club and the people, from electing to walk home after games to taking his players to a local pub at Christmas to pull pints for the punters.

JASON PUNCHEON:

WHY THE EAGLES ARE FLYING HIGH

The midfield maestro reveals the driving forces behind Crystal Palace's rise up the Premier League table

Pardew's

"The boss believes in us a lot, sometimes even more than ourselves, but he's not afraid to tell us what he demands from us, which is a good thing and obviously works for the team. We go into every game believing we can win and have been in the game every match so far this season. If you consider the matches we've lost - to Spurs, Manchester City and Arsenal they could all have been draws."

Bolasie and Zaha's skills "Yannick Bolasie and Wilfried Zaha do some crazy things in training when it comes to the skills, and both just have the natural ability to pull it off. They're the most skilled players in the league without a shadow of a doubt. There used to be a little bit of competition between them when they were younger, but they're both at an age now where they understand what's needed in the game with regards to the end product."

Cabaye's basics

"Life is great playing in the middle with Yohan Cabaye. He's a great professional and you can see he's a top player because he does the basics well. Even more impressive is his range of passing and how well he is playing considering he is not fully fit yet."

Sako's power

"Bakary Sako has come in from Wolves and has had no problems finding his feet. He's rock solid and is a real powerhouse, but you know he's going to score goals because he's got a wonderful strike with both feet and is always a threat. We have a laugh and joke every morning about if he's the hardest man in the dressing room."

Great team ethic

"We've got a good mix of ages in the squad, from youngsters like Zaha to the guys in their mid-20s like Bolasie and Pape Souare. Being one of the old boys I have to look out for them, but at the same time they don't make it hard for me, so we've got a great team ethic."

e NFL International Series rolling back into Wembley this weekend, ZOO lays out the case for a UK-based franchise...

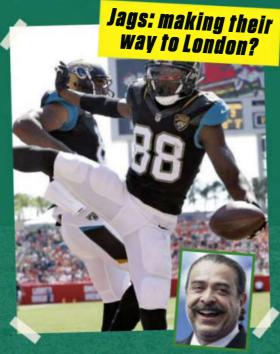

THE POLICYMAKERS

With NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell on a mission to increase league revenues to $25billion by 2027, calls for a London-based NFL franchise are emanating from the very top. A team in the capital has been earmarked for the next five to 10 years, and seized upon by Chancellor George Osborne for his plans to make London the sporting capital of the world. "The real touchdown would be to get a team based here," he said, as he tossed the pigskin with Miami Dolphins legend Dan Marino before their 27-14 loss to the New York Jets.

THE FRANCHISE

For London to have a franchise, one of the 32 less-successful sides currently plying their trade will have to up sticks and move, much like MK Dons. The San Diego Chargers, Jacksonville Jaguars, St Louis Rams and Oakland Raiders are all on short-term leases at their existing homes so are the most likely candidates. Of those, Jaquars owner Shahid Khan, who also owns Championship side Fulham, has been making moves to bring the Jags to London, signing a four-year deal for them to feature in the International Series.

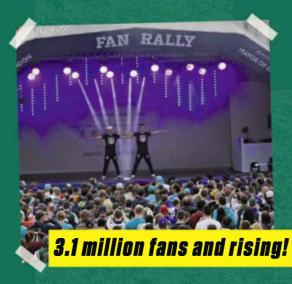

THE STADIUM

Having agreed to host at least two games per season for 10 years when it opens in 2018, Spurs' new stadium is being designed with the NFL in mind. It will feature a retractable grass field (with artificial turf underneath so it can host American football and "soccer" on the same weekend), separate NFL-specific facilities and a seating design conduciv gridiron. The architectu Spurs is using, Populous also designed 14 NFL st

THE FANS

According to NFL UK, the fan base needs to hit six million to warrant a London-based side. A recent survey puts it at 3.1 million and rising. This season's International Series sold out in February, and 40,000 fans bought season tickets to cover all three games. Jacksonville Jaguars alone can count 35,000 members in its UK fan club, Union Jax. The explosion in interest has not been lost on broadcasters either, with Sky Sports ramping up its coverage to more than 100 live games this year and the BBC signing a two-year deal to show live games. a weekly highlights show and Super Bowl 50.
